REMOVAL OF RESTRICTIONS DEPENDING UPON ACTIVITY

Those republican politicians who are openly opposing the adoption of the constitution are laying much stress upon the fact that there are restrictions to be removed from land in the Indian Territory before it will be taxable, and that therefore not only will the western half of the state be called upon to pay most of the state taxes, but it will be ruinous to maintain county government on the east side.

The weakness in this position lies in the fact that it does not contemplate any act of legislation which will remove admitted wrongs. It would certainly be weak for republicans to admit that a republican congress would refuse to remove the restrictions which it placed on the land, after it has been demonstrated that they are ill-suited and inimical to the interests of the people of the state.

Few, if any, of these politicians will say out loud that congress will refuse to provide for immediate removal of restrictions, when conditions are known. Reason tells us that the matter will only have to be presented and vigorously urged upon congress to be corrected. It is indeed very important that the restrictions shall be removed; but with a strong congressional delegation, and M. L. Turner with another man, possessed of similar force and vigor in the senate, congress will not be long in learning what Oklahoma wants in the removal of restrictions, nor will it be long in correcting the trouble. What Oklahoma wants is statehood and it also wants men in congress who can do things there for the people and do them quickly. There will be no trouble about the removal of restrictions if men are sent to the senate and house who can get results and have made a record for accomplishing things. The personnel of our senators and representatives will have much to do with the result of a campaign for removal of restrictions and other immediate needs of the state. Adv.

REPUBLICANS PLAYING POLITICS AGAINST US

One of the most flagrant pieces of injustice ever proposed against any section of the American people now threatens Oklahoma.

Certain politicians are endeavoring to keep that prospective state out of the union until after the next presidential election.

To effect this result they are seeking to have President Roosevelt resort to the desperate expedient of rejecting the state constitution.

Under the law he can do this on two grounds only: One—That the instrument does not provide for a republican form of government. Two—That it is in conflict with the constitution of the United States.

As to the first named of these grounds, Mr. Roosevelt would not have the shadow of an excuse for action, since there is not a state constitution in the nation so utterly republican as that of Oklahoma. The rejection, then, would have to be made, if at all, because of conflict with the federal constitution. The closest scrutiny of the Oklahoma instrument shows no possible point of such conflict. It was carefully drawn with the idea of avoiding just this difficulty. The president went to the unusual length of threatening rejection if a provision for "jim-crow" cars were included, whereupon it was stricken out. As he indicated no other objection, he left the inference to be drawn that he had none.

From the standpoint of the common people, the Oklahoma constitution is the most progressive ever adopted by an American commonwealth.

It provides, among other things, for direct nominations of all elective officers; for an elective corporation commission; for the prohibition of watered stock; for a labor and arbitration commission; for a fellow servant law; for the initiative and referendum; for 2-cent passenger fares, and for state ownership of segregated mineral lands. It also prohibits railroads from owning any productive agency of a natural commodity and forbids corporations from holding more land than is absolutely necessary in the operation of their business. It may be amended by a majority vote.

To reject such a constitution as this, simply for the purpose of preventing the new state from participating in the presidential election, would be a simple stupidity.

Oklahoma should have been admitted years ago, and would have been except for the fact that the party in power was busier playing politics than it was in doing justice.

At the present time the proposed state has over 800,000 population, which is much more than any other state had at the time of admission, and is more than any one of fifteen states has even now.

Once in the Union, Oklahoma would have two senators, five congressmen and seven votes in the electoral college.

It is the prospect that these senators, congressmen and electors will be against the trusts and the administration that has stirred up the politicians to attempt the destruction of an American state.—New York American.

COMMITTEE ARRANGES FOR PRIMARY JUNE 8

The Democratic Central Committee of Pontotoc county met in Ada Wednesday afternoon to make further arrangements for the primary election, necessitated by the change of date for the holding of such primary.

In the absence of Chairman Parker, Vice-Chairman Hammond, of Francis, presided, and Secretary McClure recorded the proceedings.

In conformity with the recent action of the state committee, a motion prevailed rescinding the action calling for a primary May 23, and the date of same was changed to June 8.

Charged with the duty of providing necessary boxes and booths, a committee was appointed consisting of Will MaHarg, J. J. Copeland and Dr. Ligon. It was made the further duty of this committee to frame rules and instructions for election judges, and to devise methods for proper instructions of voters; also to meet and confer with the county board of election commissioners, and to place of placing and Dr. Ligon was chosen to name anew the election judges for the various voting boxes, with instructions to follow as far as possible the appointments made some days ago, as same were published in The News.

The election ordinance of the constitution having rendered it necessary, there prevailed a motion, by W. H. L. Campbell, establishing four voting boxes in addition to those designated some time ago. One will be just east of Ada, another just west of Ada, another in that part of Stonewall township which is in commissioner district No. 1, and the fourth just outside of Roff.

All candidates are requested to remember the primary law requires them to send name, office running for, township residing in, and the required assessment fee to Secretary S. T. McClure, at Roff, at least ten days before June 8. For county offices the fee is $10, county commissioners $5, precinct offices $3.

It is expected that a quorum of the

Mrs. Guerta Main is real sick this week.

Quite a crowd gathered at the school house Saturday night for preaching, and as the preacher failed to come, the boys, namely: Mit Butler and Robert McCulloch, had a speaking for two of Center's candidates. Mr. Butler was for F. C. Krieger and Mr. McCulloch was for Mr. Tulley. The merits and demerits of both was discussed, and the orators' efforts liberally applauded. The victory was awarded to Mr. Butler. It was all in fun. Mr. Butler will make a fine orator some day.

Mrs. M. A. Barlow started last Sunday for Phoenix, Arizona, where she will make her future home.

F. C. Krieger is out canvassing. He has great confidence in his friends and thinks his prospects are very promising. GREAT DROVES OF CARIBOU.

Hunter Says Big Game Is Still Abundant in Alaska.

Ed Tinker, of East Los Angeles, has returned from a nine-year sojourn in Alaska.

"It's a life," said Tinker yesterday, "of some hardships, but I enjoyed every day of it. I hunted as much with the gun as with the gold pan."

"One winter, before the law prohibited the sale of caribou for food, my partner and I hunted for market. We were 140 miles up the river back of Dawson, and brought out the heat on sleds, my six dogs bringing out two sleds at a time. We sold upward of $6,000 worth of meat, killing 230 caribou. I had 18 caribou on the sleds the first trip out to Dawson. They weighed 2,380 pounds, and I received $1 a pound, including skins."

"You might think the game would soon be killed off at that rate, but if you were to see the droves of caribou that I have seen in that country you would readily believe that there will be game in Alaska indefinitely for the one who is willing to endure hardships with the mercury 20 degrees below. Of course, if a man is accustomed to a steam heated office and has not the pluck to subject himself to hard work and zero weather he can shoot a fine specimen of moose or caribou with a $100 bill right on the streets of Dawson."

Wanted—A Sound Kiffer.

Will not some sympathetic scientist tell me what to place beneath my typewriter to silence it? I have tried felt half an inch thick, bottle-packing pasteboard, rubber, etc., yet the clock-click-click can be heard a block away by the ice man, who always wants a brainstorm cocktail when the sound smites his auricular nerve. I want a non-conductor between the top of the desk and the feet of the machine. Suggestions thankfully received.—N. Y. Press.

Economy a la Mode.

"I buy me a beautiful dress when I need it," the feminine creature said. "But I economize on little things. I never have enough pins or hairpins. I never did have. Many women are like that, but so are the men. I know a man who takes me out to the finest dinners and gives me a different colored wine with every course, and when he has finished his dinner he invariably swipes enough matches from the stand on the table to last him a week."

HOW THEY SCORED.

PREPARED FOR THAT.

A teacher in one of the public schools was recently complimented because of the success attending the examination of her pupils. It was noticed that her class of boys seemed to be able to solve all problems. When a question was asked every boy's hand went up.

The principal of the school was putting the questions, and the lady teacher would call on a pupil to make the answer. Although more than a score of questions were asked, in no instance was an incorrect answer given. The principal was so pleased at the result that he made special reference to Miss Dash's proficiency as a teacher in each of the classrooms he visited.

Probably envy was caused by the fact that in no other classrooms did the pupils seem to be so well up in their studies. One of the teachers, whose pupils did not acquit themselves very creditably, made an investigation and succeeded in gaining the confidence of one of the boys under Miss Dash's care.

"New Johnny," said she, "how is it that all you boys know the answers?"

"But we don't all know," said Johnny.

"But you all put up your hands as if you did?"

"Miss Dash tells us all to put up our hands when the question is asked. We boys who don't know the answer put up our left hands, and the boys who know the answer put up their right hands, and then Miss Dash only asks the boys who have a right hand up."

CURIOS OF ETRUSCA

INTERESTING COLLECTION NOW IN SMITHSONIAN.

Dainty Ornamental Safety Pins Among the Relics of Many Centuries Ago—Designs Are as Fine as Those of To-Day.

An exceedingly interesting collection of Etruscan curios is being placed on exhibition for the first time in the Smithsonian institution. All those who think that hair pins, pins to keep garments in place when the buttons are gone, safety pins, tweezers and articles for the manicure table are of modern invention should examine these relics, dating back 4,000 and 5,000 years.

The modern safety pin is a poor affair when viewed beside the dozen or more varieties brought from Etruria. The most ornate were obtained in Chiusi, the ancient Clusium, city of Macaulay's Lars Porsena, who was so versatile in the fine art of swearing that his name is immortal. The men of Clusium used the safety pin with as much ease as their womankind. Some of the long bronze articles could keep the heaviest blanket in place and some were undoubtedly used to keep the trappings of horses in order. Others are so delicate and finely wrought in silver, gold and bronze, that their owners must have been far advanced in the art of looking pretty. Some are of twisted wire, looking very much like the modern filigree brooch, with rings and ornaments pending, just as they do now from the bangle bracelet of the modern belle. The savants at the Smithsonian think that some dozen or more of these dainty pins were used to confine the loose flowing robe of the Etruscan grande dame. Then here are long slender safety pins, much like those in use in every civilized home of the world. There are heavy coarse looking bronze pins evidently for slaves and poor people, but the belles in Etruria, in the year 1500, B. C., had as fine wrought and graceful brooches and toilet aids as the woman who patronizes the most renowned Parisian goldsmith.

Hair pins, hair ornaments, cute little ivory catches to keep the back hair from straying on the neck, all were old to these women of that past.

Stranger—I guess I should very much like to see over this grand historic mansion. Is it feasible?

Old Caretaker—No, it's not feasible, sir; but most gent's gives me something for taking 'em round.—Scraps.

His Motive.

"So you are going to lecture?"

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum, "not that I care for the money, but it is a pleasure to get away from your stony-faced colleagues in congress and face an audience that really wants to hear you talk."—Washington Star.

"Because we are trying it on the dog."—Baltimore American.

PETRIFIED HEAD IN LOG.

Remarkable Find Reported in Pennsylvania Mountains.

While George Woodward was running a saw mill in the mountains of Adams county, Pennsylvania, he discovered the petrified head and neck of a human being imbedded in a large oak log. Woodward removed the head and has shipped it to Dr. G. W. Tate of Altoona, for examination. The head was of perfect proportions, the features being preserved to the minutest detail in the body of the wood.

Ears, nose, mouth, eyes, eyebrows and even the lines of the face were plainly visible. The unusual color of the face was the only thing which detracted from its lifelike appearance.

The tree was cut near Lewis, the robber's cave. It is supposed that the head belonged to one of the victims of this noted outlaw, who in early times was the terror of the mountain-side.

Lewis, the robber, committed many murders along the old Shippensburg road. Numerous expeditions were sent against him, but, retreating to his impregnable stronghold in the wilds of the South mountain, he always successfully resisted attack.

BARAM CANOE HEADS.

The natives of Baram carve wooden figureheads for their canoes resembling terrible dragons with long sharp tusks, goggle eyes, and erratic horns.

STRANGE FREAK OF CAT.

Adopted Small Rat to Take Place of Dead Kitten.

Six kittens were recently added to the feline population by "Phoebe Snow," the pet cat of the ferryman who tends the "gap" in the Lackawanna yards in Hoboken, N. J. Some days later one of the little ones died.

All day long Phoebe appeared downcast, and in the afternoon started on a hunt for rats. She has a record as a rat catcher, so the ferryman was not surprised when a few minutes later, she deposited a big wharf rat at his feet.

Phoebe again disappeared, and returned a moment later with a baby rat tenderly carried in her teeth. Straight by the ferryman she marched and over to the basket where her live kittens lay, and beside them she placed the young rat.

As an experiment, the rat was taken from Phoebe several times, but on each occasion she deserted her kittens long enough to find the missing youngster and return with it to the basket.

Imagined to Death.

The thought of execution can kill. We do not all yet realize the tremendous effects of imagination.

One of the grimmest examples is that of the French criminal condemned to die who was offered the choice of public execution or of being privately bled to death. For the sake of his family's feelings he chose the latter alternative. He was placed upon a table in his cell, he felt pricking sensations in various veins, he heard what he thought was his blood escaping into a bowl. Soon he died.

But he was unwounded. He had merely been pricked with pins. The sound which he heard was that of running water. He had succumbed under a scientific experiment.

Saved by an Earthquake.

The earthquake in Jamaica reminds a correspondent of a curious epitaph which he read on a tombstone there some years ago. It runs thus: "Here lieth the body of Lewis Gaddy, Esq., who died on the 22d of September, 1737, aged 80. He was born at Montpelier, in France, which place, he left for his religion, and settled on this island, where, in the great earthquake, 1672, he was swallowed up, and, by the wonderful providence of God, by a second shock, was thrown out into the sea, where he continued swimming until he was taken up by a boat, and thus miraculously preserved."

PRAYS TO PIGS.

The native of Borneo prays to a pig on all important occasions. If he fears enemies, ill luck, or sickness are coming, the pig is brought into the hut with its legs tied together. A lighted brand is applied to scorch it slightly, then the pig is asked about the matter which the natives wish to know.

WAR ON THE WOLF

The losses from the destruction of stock by wolves and coyotes in the western United States amount to millions of dollars annually and seem to be increasing rather than decreasing. Practical means of preventing these losses are urgently needed. The present circular, based on field work of the Biological Survey, aims to present briefly the best methods of hunting, trapping, and poisoning wolves and coyotes, of finding the dens and destroying the young, and of fencing to protect stock. By the methods given herein the numbers of wolves and coyotes may be rapidly diminished and the losses of stock thereby reduced to a minimum.

If the time of breeding, character of breeding grounds, and habits of wolves are known, the dens may be easily located and the pups secured. In this way, more effectually and economically than any other, increase of wolves and coyotes may be prevented. The large size of the litters makes the method, especially important, as wolves usually have six to ten pups and coyotes five to nine. It is now positively known that both wolves and coyotes pair for the breeding season, and that the males stay with the females and help feed and care for the pups during the summer.

In the western United States wolves breed mainly in valley and foothill country or in low mountains. For breeding dens they choose, if possible, natural cavities or washed-out hollows on south slopes of rocky or badland ridges. There is usually a high point not far from the den, where the old male stands guard during the day.

In the north good tracking snow usually lies on the ground during the early part of the breeding season, which renders the finding of dens particularly easy, but even on bare ground there is little difficulty in locating every wolf den. This may be done by simply riding along the crests of the ridges until the wolf tracks are found. The tracks once found, the direction of the den can be told from the lay of the land. Near the den the tracks usually gather into well-worn trails that may be followed on bare ground as readily as on snow.

Coyotes make their dens in the same kinds of places as wolves, and also dig burrows or use old badger holes, slightly enlarged; so a spade is often necessary in getting out the young.

Ranchmen cannot afford to let wolf or coyote pups grow up on or near their ranges when an hour's ride will often serve to locate the dens. The young pups of both wolves and coyotes are nearly black, but as they grow older the color fades to dull yellowish, and when about three months old a new light-gray coat is acquired.

For wolves the best No. 4 double spring trap with heavy welded or special wolf chain should be used. If the trap is to be fastened to a stationary object, the chain should have a swivel at each end. If to a drag, one swivel is enough. Always use a drag if possible. The best is a stone of 30 or 40 pounds weight, to which the chain is securely wired. A long oval stone is best. A piece of telegraph wire or smooth fence wire five or six feet long should be passed around one end of the stone; then doubled through the trap ring, with a twist to hold the ring in the middle; then around the other end of the stone and back on the opposite side to connect with the first loop.

If properly fastened, a jerk on the trap tends to draw together and tighten the loops, and the spring of the connecting wire prevents a sudden jar that might break trap or chain. If an oval stone is not at hand, a triangular or square stone may be used by passing the wire over the three or four sides and securely connecting it above and below.

If no stones are to be had and it is necessary to stake the traps, twisted iron stakes that can be driven below the surface of the ground should be used. They should be of good iron straps, at least 18 inches long, three-quarters of an inch wide, and three-sixteenths of an inch thick, turned over at the top into a P-shaped loop to connect with the ring of the trap chain.

When possible, place the trap between two tufts of grass or weeds, so it can be readily approached from one side only. Bury the stone, chain, and trap out of sight, with the trap nearest to the "runway" where the wolves follow a trail or road, cross a narrow pass, or visit a carcass. The trap should be flush with the surface of the ground and the jaws and pan covered with a piece of paper to keep the earth from clogging under the pan. Fine earth should then be sprinkled over the paper until all traces of trap and paper are concealed. The surface of the ground and surroundings should appear as nearly as possible undisturbed. The dust may be given a natural appearance by sprinkling it with water. Touching the ground or other objects with the hands, spitting near the trap, or in any way leaving a trace of human odors near by should be avoided. Old, well-scented gloves should be worn, and a little of the scent used for the traps should be rubbed on the shoe soles. A piece of old cowhide may be used to stand on and to pile the loose earth on while burying the drag and trap.

For coyotes use the best No. 3 double spring trap, unless in a wolf country, where it is better to use a trap strong enough to hold a wolf. In setting the trap use the same method and bait as for wolves, but the traps may be staked or fastened to a stationary object with more safety.

Success in trapping depends largely upon the use of a scent that will attract wolves and coyotes to the traps and keep them tramping and pawing there until caught. Meat bait alone is of little use and often, indeed, scares the animals away. Of the many scents and combinations tested the fetid bait has proved most successful.

No poison has as yet proved so effective as pure sulphate of strychnine, provided the proper dose is used. The most effective dose is four grains for wolves and two grains for coyotes. The common three-grain gelatin capsules sold by druggists will hold, if well filled, four grains of strychnine and are better than the larger capsules. The regular two-grain capsules should be used for coyotes. The capsules should be filled, securely capped, and every trace of the intensely bitter drug wiped from the outside.

Each capsule should be inserted in a piece of beef suet, the size of a walnut and the cavity securely closed to keep out moisture. Lean meat should not be used, as the juice soon dissolves the gelatin of the capsule. The necessary number of poisoned baits may be prepared and carried in a tin can or pail. They should never be handled except with gloved hands or forceps. The baits may be dropped from horseback along a scented drag line made by dragging an old bone or piece of hide well saturated with the fetid scent, or they may be placed around or partly under any carcass on which the wolves or coyotes are feeding, or along trails which they are in the habit of following.

Gelatin capsules quickly dissolve in the juices of the stomach. Strychnine taken on an empty stomach sometimes kills in a very few minutes, but on a full stomach its action is much slower, and the animal may have time to travel a considerable distance.

Those republican politicians who are openly opposing the adoption of the constitution are laying much stress upon the fact that there are restrictions to be removed from land in the Indian Territory before it will be taxable, and that therefore not only will the western half of the state be called upon to pay most of the state taxes, but it will be ruinous to maintain county government on the east side.

The weakness in this position lies in the fact that it does not contemplate any act of legislation which will remove admitted wrongs. It would certainly be weak for republicans to admit that a republican congress would refuse to remove the restrictions which it placed on the land, after it has been demonstrated that they are ill-suited and inimical to the interests of the people of the state.

Few, if any, of these politicians will say out loud that congress will refuse to provide for immediate removal of restrictions, when conditions are known. Reason tells us that the matter will only have to be presented and vigorously urged upon congress to be corrected. It is indeed very important that the restrictions shall be removed, but with a strong congressional delegation, and M. L. Turner with another man possessed of similar force and vigor in the senate, congress will not be long in learning what Oklahoma wants in the removal of restrictions, nor will it be long in correcting the trouble. What Oklahoma wants is statehood and it also wants men in congress who can do things there for the people and do them quickly. There will be no trouble about the removal of restrictions if men are sent to the senate and house who can get results and have made a record for accomplishing things. The personnel of our senators and representatives will have much to do with the result of a campaign for removal of restrictions and other immediate needs of the state. —Adv.

REPUBLICANS PLAYING POLITICS AGAINST US

One of the most flagrant pieces of injustice ever proposed against any section of the American people now threatens Oklahoma.

Certain politicians are endeavoring to keep that prospective state out of the union until after the next presidential election.

To effect this result they are seeking to have President Roosevelt resort to the desperate expedient of rejecting the state constitution.

Under the law he can do this on two grounds only: One—that the instrument does not provide for a republican form of government. Two—that it is in conflict with the constitution of the United States.

As to the first named of these grounds, Mr. Roosevelt would not have the shadow of an excuse for action, since there is not a state constitution in the nation so utterly republican as that of Oklahoma. The rejection, then, would have to be made, if at all, because of conflict with the federal constitution. The closest scrutiny of the Oklahoma instrument shows no possible point of such conflict. It was carefully drawn with the idea of avoiding just this difficulty. The president went to the unusual length of threatening rejection if a provision for "jim-crow" cars were included, whereupon it was stricken out. As he indicated no other objection, he left the inference to be drawn that he had none.

From the standpoint of the common people, the Oklahoma constitution is the most progressive ever adopted by an American commonwealth.

It provides, among other things, for direct nominations of all elective officers; for an elective corporation commission; for the prohibition of watered stock; for a labor and arbitration commission; for a fellow servant law; for the initiative and referendum; for 2-cent passenger fares; and for state ownership of segregated mineral lands. It also prohibits railroads from owning any productive agency of a natural commodity and forbids corporations from holding more land than is absolutely necessary in the operation of their business. It may be amended by a majority vote.

To reject such a constitution as this, simply for the purpose of preventing the new state from participating in the presidential election, would be a simple stupidity.

Oklahoma should have been admitted years ago, and would have been except for the fact that the party in power was busily playing politics then it was in doing justice.

At the present time the proposed state has over 800,000 population, which is much more than any other state had at the time of admission, and is more than any one of fifteen states has even now.

Once in the Union, Oklahoma would have two senators, five congressmen and seven votes in the electoral college.

It is the prospect that these senators, congressmen and electors will be against the trusts and the administration that has stirred up the politicians to attempt the destruction of an American state. —New York American.

COMMITTEE ARRANGES FOR PRIMARY JUNE 8

The Democratic Central Committee of Pontotoc county met in Ada Wednesday afternoon to make further arrangements for the primary election, necessitated by the change of date for the holding of such primary.

In the absence of Chairman Parker, Vice-Chairman Hammond, of Francis, presided, and Secretary McClure recorded the proceedings.

In conformity with the recent action of the state committee, a motion prevailed rescinding the action calling for a primary May 28, and the date of same was changed to June 8.

Charged with the duty of providing necessary boxes and booths, a committee was appointed consisting of Will McHarg, J. J. Copeland and Dr. Ligon. It was made the further duty of this committee to frame rules and instructions for election judges and to devise methods for proper instructions of voters; also to meet and confer with the county board of election commissioners of placing and Dr. Ligon was chosen to name anew the election judges for the various voting boxes, with instructions to follow as far as possible the appointments made some days ago, as same were published in The News.

The election ordinance of the constitution having rendered it necessary, there prevailed a motion, by W. H. L. Campbell, establishing four voting boxes in addition to those designated some time ago. One will be just east of Ada, another just west of Ada, another in that part of Stonewall township which is in commissioner district No. 1, and the fourth just outside of Roff.

All candidates are requested to remember the primary law requires them to send name, office running for, township residing in, and the required assessment fee to Secretary S. T. McCharg, at Roff, at least ten days before June 8. For county offices the fee is $10, county commissioners $5, precinct officers $3.

GREAT DROVES OF CARIBOU.

Hunter Says Big Game is Still Abundant in Alaska.

Ed Tinker, of East Los Angeles, has returned from a nine-year sojourn in Alaska.

"It's a life," said Tinker yesterday. "of some hardships, but I enjoyed every day of it. I hunted as much with the gun as with the gold pan."

"One winter, before the law prohibited the sale of caribou for food, my partner and I hunted for market. We were 140 miles up the river beat on Dawson, and brought out the heat on sleds, my six dogs bringing out two sleds at a time. We sold upward of $6,000 worth of meat, killing 230 caribou. I had 18 caribou on the sleds the first trip out to Dawson. They weighed 2,380 pounds, and I received $1 a pound, including skins."

"You might think the game would soon be killed off at that rate, but if you were to see the droves of caribou that I have seen in that country you would readily believe that there will be game in Alaska indefinitely for the one who is willing to endure hardships with the mercury 20 degrees below. Of course, if a man is accustomed to a steam heated office and has not the pluck to subject himself to hard work and zero weather he can shoot a fine specimen of moose or caribou with a $100 bill right on the streets of Dawson."

A CHANCE FOR A BIG PLAY HOUSE IN ADA

Ada has an opportunity to have an elegant new $15,000 opera house building, one that would be an honor to our growing little city, and an advertisement of our prosperity and upbuilding spirits.

Messrs. Beard & Blanks, real estate men, have put a proposition up to the citizens of Ada, that they will erect a magnificent $15,000 play house, if the citizens will take the first $5,000 and dispose of 900 tickets to the first entertainment. The proposition is to ask each club member to dispose of ten tickets each, either to local parties or to visitors who may be in the city, and it is thought that the number can soon be sold in this manner. This is a real opportunity in a city of this size is not a paying proposition, and they are not erected by individual parties. In cities all over the country this same proposition is being met, and it is only asked that these tickets be sold now and Sept. 15.

The proposition is the opinion that this would be a great thing for our city. It would advertise us, it would help us in many ways, and it would afford a place of entertainment such as only a growing city of our class needs.

Will the citizens get together?

MADDENED MOB ATTEMPTS TO LYNCH GIRL'S ASSAILANT

Tulsa, A. T., May 1.—A heavily armed guard is on duty at the Tulsa jail tonight, to prevent the lynching of B. L. Brummett, a deaf mute, who says that his home is at Earl Junction, Mo., and who is charged with criminal assault. He has pleaded guilty to the crime. The complaining witness is a fourteen-year-old girl, Rose Williams, daughter of A. B. Williams of Kellyville, A. T.

Twice within the last few hours has Brummett's life been threatened by a maddened mob, whose members declare that they will not be satisfied until death has been meted out to Brummett. And it is now feared that an assault will be made on the jail in which Brummett is confined.

Brummett met the Williams girl late yesterday afternoon, just outside of Kellyville. His conduct toward her was insulting and when she remonstrated, he struck her on the head with a rock, badly lacerating her skull. She was otherwise injured.

A mob was quickly formed and went in pursuit of Brummett who was reported to have been seen going along the road in the neighborhood of Bristow. There he was captured by two farmers, and turned over to Deputy Marshal Freshour, who started with him to Tulsa.

Kellyville, the home of the girl, is on the route between Bristow and Tulsa. News of the fact that Brummett had been captured was telephoned to Kellyville, and when the train stopped just outside, that town a mob openly declaring vengeance and avowing that they would take the prisoner from the custody of the deputy, attempted to board the train. Trainmen locked the doors and the train was quickly moved. At the Kellyville station a second mob waited the approach of the train and the engineer, pulling the throttle wide open, went through the town at full speed.

Fearing that the mob would come to Tulsa tonight, the guard at the jail was reinforced.

When arraigned in the commissioner's court today, Brummett pleaded guilty to the crime. He was committed to the grand jury without bail.

SUES BIXBY TO RECOVER VALUE OF TOWN LOTS

Muskogee, I. T., May 2.—Yesterday afternoon M. L. Mott, attorney for the Creek Nation, filed suits against James Bixby, commissioner to the Five Civilized Tribes, and Leo E. Bennett, United States marshal of the western district, to recover for the Creek nation the value of town lots which he alleges that they unlawfully secured when the schedule of town lots Muskogee was made. The property has become very valuable. These suits are in addition to the five recently filed by Mott against other citizens.

Born. — The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Meaders, who was born to them on May 1, 1907, at Muskogee, I. T., is a daughter also, came to live at the home of Attorney J. E. Gribbs and wife.

All kinds of plumbing goods—Goffman & Owens.

Separate Schools and Coaches. — A hearty sympathy with that mandate of the constitution which requires the legislature to provide for the negro children "separate from white" attended by the other children of the state.

Also, I would urge the enactment of a law popularly characterized as the "Jim Crow" law, requiring separate railroad coaches and waiting rooms for the negroes. I am an ardent advocate of the utmost constitutional legislation looking to the social segregation of the two races in our land. From platform of O. B. Weaver, candidate for state senator.

THE CENTURY CLUB

Met Tuesday With Mr. Bixby and Adjourned for Summer.

The Twentieth Century club held its last regular meeting of this club year with Mrs. Bixby on Tuesday.

This being the day for election of officers no lesson was prepared. Six new members signed the constitution, viz: Marydames Brown, Sneed, Leavre, Meaders, Rives, and Miss Gladys Torbett.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Hope; vice-president, Mrs. Stone; secretary, Mrs. Bixby; treasurer, Mrs. Galbraith; parliamentarian, Mrs. Mason; reporter, Mrs. Thompson; program committee, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. McKinley, Mrs. Stone.

Mrs. Hope has served as president before. She was elected against her own protest. Shakespeare said, "Some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them."

After the close of the business session the "Social Hours" which was so much enjoyed, included a vocal duet by Mrs. Brown and Miss Hughes, also a vocal solo by Mrs. Rives.

A lively interest was taken in the contest of quotations from authors studied this season.

After daily refreshments were served the club adjourned, each member regretting that the club year had passed so quickly.

English authors will be the basis of next year's study.

The next regular meeting of the club will be on the first Tuesday in October.

If the Twenty-Five Thousand club will build an opera house they will be building Ada.

THE PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE!

Hereby is announced the Mason Drug Co. a candidate for the Most Popular Drug Store in Pontotoc county, subject to the action and approval of all people who want DRUGS, HONEST PRICES, and a SQUARE DEAL. And this date will be an easy one.

ROY HOFFMAN

For the United States Senate from the Oklahoma side of the state, subject to the decision of the Democratic primaries on May 23, 1907.

WHAT THEY THINK OF FURMAN.

Judge Henry M. Furman, U. S. Senator to be from Oklahoma, maintains no press agents to keep his name in the newspaper lime light. He is too poor a man to employ such a service, and if he were not poor he doesn't need press agents. The newspapers know him and the people know him.

To illustrate how generally he is known and esteemed and his candidacy is supported, listen to this excerpt from a letter to an Ada citizen, an unsolicited tribute from a prominent Democrat of El Reno, Oklahoma, once a high official who has more than received a flattering endorsement from the people of his county in the form of election to high office—here is what he says of Furman: "I am a friend to the candidacy of Judge Furman and think that he is the man for the place he seeks. I believe he is one of the few men running for public office who will represent the principles embodied in the constitution recently drafted. I think that Judge Furman will outstrip all his competitors in this part of the state. In fact this sentiment seems to be almost universal."

This from an independent thinking man, one unbought and unpurchasable! During the last few days Judge Furman has been addressing the people at various points in the Choctaw Nation. Everywhere he goes he is greeted by large crowds who listen expectantly, are gratified with his words, and enthusiastically shake his hand in endorsement of his candidacy.

The difference between Furman and many other candidates is: who Furman is, what he is, what he stands for, and what he would toil for if placed in high position, were all well-known to the masses of the people long ago, long before the present avalanche of campaign literature.

The people had faith in Furman before this campaign began. That's the reason everybody predicts his nomination by an overwhelming majority, and it's a mighty good reason.

The News would like to see a movement toward building for Ada an opera house. What do you think 25,000?

Still in the Race.

T. J. Smith of Roff wants the democracy of Pontotoc county to understand that he is still in the race for sheriff, and intends to be elected, regardless of reports to the contrary. His announcement appears in this issue. A writeup of his candidacy next week.

ACID IN THE BLOOD.

A well-known authority on Rheumatism gives the following valuable yet simple and harmless prescription, which any one can easily prepare at home:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces.

Mix by shaking in a bottle, and take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bed time.

He states that the ingredients can be obtained from any good prescription pharmacy at small cost.

This mixture is said to relieve almost any case of Rheumatism, which is nothing more or less than sour blood—too much acid in the system, which in damp, cool weather forms into minute crystals about the joints and muscles, causing the awful pain and misery of Rheumatism.

The above mixture is said to force the kid to purify and sweeten the blood, causing the Rheumatic pain and swelling to diminish with each dose, until permanent results are obtained, and without injuring the stomach.

It is worth while giving this a trial, anyhow.

DENISON, FT. WORTH, DALLAS

THE WAPLES-PLATTER GROCER CO.

"I don't cry any more about anything," said the bachelor girl. "When I get so sad I don't know what to do. I go out and get me something to eat. A little fellow I was very fond of once taught me that. He asked me to take luncheon with him to talk over a quarrel we were having. During the talking over it I got to crying. I cried all over my fish. He ordered me some more fish and scolded me while they were getting it ready. 'Never cry, Frances,' he said, 'as long as you've got a good luncheon or dinner before you. It isn't worth while.' No, I never saw him again, but whenever I want to cry I think of him and get me something good to eat instead."

Had Use for Both.

Chicago policemen sometimes make themselves useful, although perhaps not in the way they are supposed to. This was shown by an incident in a South side home. The mistress of the house happened to go into the kitchen during the evening. There she saw the cook evidently enjoying the company of two big dispensers of the law. "Why, Maggie," she exclaimed, "isn't one policeman enough for you?" "Shure, ma'am, but wan is my chap-aron," answered the cook. "Which one?" queried the lady. "Sometimes the wan and sometimes the other," was the cheery reply from the resourceful Maggie. — Chicago Chronicle.

Go to England to Marry.

Every year from 500 to 1,200 couples go to England from the continent, mostly from Germany, to get married. To comply with the conditions of the English law the bride usually comes over first, stays one night in a hotel and gives notice of the marriage on the following day. Then the man arrives and the ceremony takes place. It is generally by license, as otherwise both would have to be in England for four weeks.

MILK THE ORIGINAL FOOD.

Prof. Osler Tells of the Dietary Needs of Mankind.

Comparing the human body and the steam engine in a lecture, Prof. Osler said one differentiating feature was that while the engine had only one furnace, and a large one, the human body consisted of myriads of little furnaces—that is, cells. Milk was the original food of man. It contained the four things that were necessary as food—fat, curd, sugar and salt—all dissolved in water. Dr. Wotr Mitchell once showed him a robust-looking patient, and he remarked: "He looks as if he had been living on the fat of the land." "No," replied Dr. Mitchell, "on the fat of the cow." That patient had a five years' milk diet—except on Sundays, when his wife insisted on rice pudding. If vegetarians would eat their vegetables and say less about it they would do well. Many vegetarians were not as robust mentally as physically.

Alcohol was quite unnecessary. If all the beer and spirits could be dumped into the Irish channel and the North sea for a year, people in England would be infinitely better off. "If," he continued, "on the second day you dumped all the tobacco into the sea it would be good for you and hard on the fish."

FIRST TO UTILIZE GAS.

Credit Accorded William Murdoch, Scottish Mining Engineer.

January 28 was an interesting centenary, that of the first experimental lighting of a street with gas lamps in England, for on that date, 1807, through the exertions of Frederick Albert Winsor, Pall Mall was illuminated with a series of these now familiar sources of light, says the London Globe.

Winsor's work was the development of the earlier experiments and suggestions of William Murdoch, a Scottish mining engineer employed in the Redruth mines, Cornwall. Murdoch appears to have been the first to suggest that gas might be conveyed in tubes and used instead of lamps and candles. He made a very ingenious gas lantern for himself, with which he used to light his way over the Cornish moors at night. This lantern consisted of a bag filled with gas and fitted with a tube, at the end of which the gas could be lighted.

Carrying the bag under his arm, Murdoch used to lighten his way home at night. On meeting any one it is said that he would give the bag a squeeze and thus send out a long tongue of flame. This led to his being looked upon as the demon of the Cornish moors.

MORNING IN THE MOUNTAINS.

Rest and Peace to the Jaded Dweller in the City.

What recollections these thoughts of mornings in the mountains brings us! The soft breeze, laden with the odors of pine and balsam, steals through our open window. The lazy restfulness of doing nothing, if nothing it pleases us to do, or the anxiety for action when action has been decided upon; the healthy, vigorous appetite waiting to be satisfied. Where do we find such mornings except in the mountains? And the evenings—the silent, the mind invigorated by the long tramp over mountains or strenuous work of trouting and photographing. And last, but by no means least, those campfires, with our party gathered around within a circle of light, talking over the experiences of the day, singing songs and telling stories. Who that has sat and listened to good stories while watching the climbing flames and smoke of a campfire will ever forget it? Thoughts that are impossible come then. You are carried away and become a part of the story that is being told. But we are in the city, with its noise and bustle! Let us get out of it, and be off for the mountains for two weeks' sweet communion with nature. —Outer's Book.

Hit the Lawyer Hard.

Joseph H. Choate, the famous lawyer and diplomat, said at a lawyers' dinner:

"We lawyers couldn't do better than resolve, on the new year, to be gentler in our cross-examinations. Rudeness in cross-examination never, never pays. This is a truth that I once saw proven in a damage suit."

"In this suit a cross-examining lawyer shouted at a witness in overall: 'You there in the overalls, how much are you paid for telling untruths?'"

"'Less than you are,' the witness retorted, 'or you'd be in overalls, too.'"

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fuel stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

AT FASHION'S SHRINE

As we predicted, the black and white stripe is first favorite among dress goods, especially when it bears a smooth surface, the black being broken by the white, the white being broken by the black. One of the prettiest models in this has a fitted skirt with bands of the stripe cut horizontally together with a short coat having the wide sleeves and a turned-down collar of embroidery tied with a silk tie.

The wide stripes are the distinctive feature of the season, either cut in a straight line, or put in separate bands, or would make a pattern of the stripes, and depend from tones of black and brown, and even of gray and light gray. The wide stripes are the distinctive feature of the season, either cut in a straight line, or put in separate bands, or would make a pattern of the stripes, and depend from tones of black and brown, and even of gray and light gray.

There is no diminution to the favor being accorded to the blouse and vest.

FOR THE SPRING

The lingerie description, these have been placed within the possibilities of the multitude.

A pretty shape of coat rounds from the front to a full at the back, and there is much attention being paid to the short jacket which has a seam just above the waist and a full to reach this.

The sacques have a very modified fulness, and a little mantle which deserves admiration, being neither exactly a coat, nor yet a domino, but yet possessing virtues belonging to both.

away! Old materials, old colors, old ideas may still be used, but they must enter into calculation rather as accessories to be a combination with new suggestions than as a whole. The spirit of change is abroad in the land, and it makes itself felt nowhere more potentially than in dress. We may wear last season's clothes, but not as they were, and to the beauty of the old things for the old things never lost themselves in the past, as now, and here the popular silks are their salvation. It is the exception when a gown of silk itself is not trimmed with a silk of another weave, or of a different color. Taffeta is used rather for ornamental purposes than as entire costumes, except in black, which is as popular as ever.

The majority of silks are figured, yet plain weaves are strictly speaking, the best goods. Plain duchesse, which has been on the market for many seasons, is heralded as a novelty for coat gowns, and those of its construction are indeed very smart. For this purpose, both colors and black are in order.

Tweed, shantung, tussah, rayon, and mink, are popular for day and evening costumes, for coat suits, for formal or informal occasions, for separate coats or for entire suits. They require but little trimming, drape gracefully, wear well, and altogether possess those qualities which go to make up a satisfactory spring fabric.

How Woman Has Elevated the Stage

By Julia Marlowe

Actresses in Shakespeare's Time Regarded as Disagreeable Struggles of Famous Actresses to Win Recognition Mrs. Drew's Triumph as a Manager Women Inherently Suited for Dramatic Achievement The Actress Was Advanced the Cause of Women

Julia Marlowe, though regarded as an American actress, was born in the lake country of Switzerland. She was a child of four years when her family removed to a farm in Kansas. At 12 years of age she joined a Juvenile "Pioneer" company, and soon attracted attention by her clever acting and her rich, clear voice. Other members followed her example, and after three years, reappearing as "Pioneers" in "Pioneer" at the Bijou theatre in New York. After that recognition, she was engaged by the Bijou theatre for several years longer, with disappointing results. Various kinds of dramatic parts were given her, but she was not successful. It was not until she was 18 years of age that she was given the part of Desdemona in "Othello," and she was successful. This was the beginning of her career as an actress.

I think few people can realize how fierce has been the strife in regard to women on the stage and how difficult it has been for them to convince the world at large of the importance of their hard-won position. I am speaking now of the past. Happily at the present stage of dramatic development woman's standard is as high and her position as assured as that of the man.

It was not always so. Looking back to the age of oppression and intolerance, when in 1660 woman first appeared in dramatic representations, we find her entrance marked as a dramatic advancement. The first record of woman's appearance upon the stage is December 6, 1660. The play was Shakespeare's "Othello," and the Desdemona was played by a woman. There has been considerable doubt as to whom this honor belongs. Some have given it to Anne Marshall. The more general supposition is that Margaret Hughes deserves this right to immortality. We have Peppys' authority for it that women appeared in King's company in London on January 13, 1661, in "Berenice" and "The Beggar's Bush."

Their early appearances were received with great disfavor. Dr. Doris tells us that the writers of the time denounced the first actresses as "unwomanly and graceless"—not meaning that they were ungainly and unattractive, but that they were acting in a way below their dignity. "Glad I am to say," remarked Thomas Brand, speaking of these actresses, "that they were hissed, hooted and pelted from the stage, so that I do not think they will soon be ready to try the same again." He adds that well-disposed people were righteously indignant at these women, whom Pyrrhus, a vigorous puritan of the time, called "monsters."

Notwithstanding the marked disfavor with which they were first received, reasonable and serious-minded persons could not fail to see the propriety of Juliet and Desdemona being acted by girls rather than boys. It would appear that immediately upon this important progressive step the artistic need for woman's appearance must have been generally felt.

We read that soon afterward actresses were in great demand. It was found that they not only increased the popularity of the theaters in which they performed, but that their cooperation was indispensable to the proper presentation of any play. They made possible a fullness and a beauty of interpretation which had not been dreamed of before.

Take for single example the woman of Shakespeare. They stand as vivid types of truth and beauty. They are so alive with the warmth of femininity that their expression by other than women is in itself a monstrous sacrilege. A play performed by men can hardly be imagined to-day and the wonder is that such an absurdity ever existed.

The realization of the necessity of woman's cooperation with man in dramatic achievement grew rapidly. For men's minds were at this time too highly susceptible to advancement to remain in ignorance of this need. So it was not long before actresses were recognized and highly respected. This was so true in the case of Mrs. Betterton that when in 1674 "Callista" was performed at Court, the actress was chosen as mistress to the princesses Mary and Anne, and heads of the subsequent graceful eloquence and dignity of bearing of these ladies was accredited to Mrs. Betterton. Perhaps no finer compliment was ever paid to a woman in the history of the stage.

What a vast work has been accomplished by women in the drama since then, and what a lasting monument of art she has reared for herself in the annals of the stage! To those whose souls are filled with sacred reverence for creative genius what wealth of delight in looking back upon the glowing record of the theater when the Gwynne, Margaret Worthington, Nance Oldfield, Sarah Siddons, and more lately, Rachel, Ristori, Fanny Kemble, Charlotte Cushman, Helen Faucit, Adelaide Neilson, and a host of others stand forth as irrefutable proofs of the dignity and importance of woman's work along the lines of truly artistic achievement.

As an evidence of her serious devotion to this art in particular, and as proof that it has absorbed her very being as no other calling ever has done, one has but to offer the annals of the stage. With woman the stage has not been a "façade," nor has it been a "medium" for the mere gratification of her vanity. It has been and is a life devotion, an art, to which she has given her best intellectual and emotional self.

Courage and perseverance have been woman's battle cry since the year 1660. What greater instance of these qualities is to be found in all history than the grim, sad experience of the great Rachel, who, when a scratched child, traveled in poverty, and was cold from one winter's exposure down to another, and who in order to possess a copy of Racine's plays was obliged, through trudging through mud and rain, to pawn her umbrella for the pitiful sum of 10 pence.

The history of Charlotte Cushman is too well known to make a review of her untiring perseverance necessary. The heart-rending episodes of her life when poor, the supporting of others lacking beauty and charm, the struggle to influence managers to give her the opportunity of expressing the genius she felt burning within her, from one of the most striking chapters in the history of womanhood. Consider, too, the life of Mrs. Lander, who besides her valuable services in the dramatic field, took upon herself the entire charge of the hospital department of Fort Royal, B. C. She lives in memory to us as the "Blessed Name of Florence Nightingale" ends to the English.

It is unnecessary to go back in the history of the stage for such examples. We have them near at hand. The struggles of Mme. Modjeska and of Miss Clara Morris and their final and lasting artistic victories are well known to all who have watched with interest and sympathy the lives of artists on the stage.

It is often stated that woman is lacking in the faculty of creative genius, and indeed that in this particular, by contrast with man, she is decidedly inferior. This is perhaps a reasonable conclusion in view of her history. But it is not so emphatic as it seems when we consider her dramatic work.

In this, by no means a new thought, that man is by nature more intellectual and woman by nature more emotional. Of course, it is not meant by this that man is never emotional, nor woman never intellectual. Yet it is surely fair to assume that man belongs the power of intellectuality, and to woman the emotional quality. Does it not seem, therefore, that the very possession by nature of this latter quality, which certainly is an absolute necessity in dramatic art, has made her inherently suited for dramatic achievement?

Mr. Ruskin, in speaking of the necessary qualities that go to form great artists, says: "First, sensibility and tenderness; second, imagination; and third, industry." Woman's nature is peculiarly alive to all of these conditions. It is then no wonder that women on the stage have accomplished great things and will accomplish greater things in the future, when such women as Modjeska, Terry, Dugé and the matchless Bernhardt continue through inspiration to show their genius to the world.

Woman's work in literature, with few exceptions, has been denied any claim to greatness. In music and in other arts she is admitted to have shown no particular creative power. But her place upon the stage is as absolutely unquestioned as man's. In having thus secured for herself an eminent position in the drama, the actress has advanced the whole cause of woman, since every individual triumph raises the estimation in which the intellectual achievements of a whole class are held. Women are better understood because she has been faithful to her place upon the stage as an absolutely unquestioned as man's. In having thus secured for herself an eminent position in the drama, the actress has advanced the whole cause of woman, since every individual triumph raises the estimation in which the intellectual achievements of a whole class are held.

I thoroughly believe that it is the duty of mothers to foster in the hearts of their children while at a tender age a serious consideration for the better forms of dramatic literature and of dramatic representation. Let them teach their children to avoid the unhappy tendency of the present age which regards acting merely as a form of amusement rather than an instrument combining a means for intellectual control and artistic suggestion, presented in an attractive and inspiring manner.

That woman incapable of arduous effort and untiring devotion has been demonstrated by her work on the stage. She has helped to elevate the standard of the dramatic art, and the educational forces of life. She has done to make true what Morley says: "At the playhouse door, then, we may say to the doubting folk: Boldly, for here, too, are the gods."

Got Information Wanted.

"Is it a fact," asked an English judge—Justice Darling—the other day on counsel in a case that was before him, "that insurance companies are against a successful appeal by the other side?" "Yes," answered the judge. "And they have different rates for different judges."

LACKING IN GRACE

CHARGE OFTEN MADE AGAINST AMERICAN WOMEN.

Carelessness in Walking and Posture of the Figure Responsible for This Criticism—Home Gymnastics.

How to dispose of one's hands is a great test of breeding, and one's good appearance greatly depends on an upright carriage, a good pose of the head, and a good pose of the body.

Showing Repose of the Hands.

and foot. It is a reproach leveled against American women that few of them know how to walk. Indeed, we have heard it boldly asserted that the only women who can walk as they should are the handsome Spanish

BIG BROOCH IS ALL THE GO.

Style of Two Generations Ago Is Back in Favor.

Big brooches are all the go—really big ones, such as were worn two generations ago; only, with the exception of the cameo pins, they are more gorgeous affairs. The modern big brooch gleams and sparkles or is a sheet of vivid color. There is nothing demure about it—it is a striking, effective ornament.

Most of the big pins hold a single semi-precious stone. The stone makes the brooch, for the setting is simply a narrow rim about it. Transparent stones are not as a rule, backed with setting, as this detracts from their appearance.

Amethyst and topaz seem to outnumber other transparent stones used for these big brooches, such as garnet, peridot, aquamarine, etc. Well-cut topaz pins gleam like living fire, the amethyst pins glow with a more subdued light.

Alsatian Bows.

One of the most fashionable accessories to "bridesmaids' costumes" at present are the Alsatian bows for the hair. These are especially suitable for young girls, either for the occasions of weddings or for evening functions. They are exceedingly dashing in appearance and yet very simple, and are much more becoming to young girls than feather or cigarette ornaments, while they are also newer though not more becoming than the leaf or flower wreaths.

The bow goes directly in front of a twisted piece of the material going around the head, the high collar as a snood. The bows may be made either of gauze sprinkled with crystals, gold spangles, etc., or of liberty satin or velvet to match or contrast with the costume, or of cloth of gold or silver. The bow is quite large and very jaunty.

Tips on Neck of Waist.

Here's a point about the neck. The width of the back between the shoulder seams should equal in width that of one of the front portions of the blouse between the shoulder seam and the front of the neck. All told, the neck should be divided into exactly three equal parts, one for each side front and one for the back. A back that does not measure exactly the width of the side front is too narrow and the neck will neither fit properly nor comfortably. The shoulder seams should always remain straight at the neckband. If it needs to be moved, the alteration must only be made toward the back or toward the front at the armhole.

The simplest, fast, bleach, known is almond milk, and is good if constantly used. Blanch 30 large almonds. Break into a small basin and put in a lump of sugar. Take a wooden potato masher (not a wire or metal one) and break the almonds and sugar, then slowly, almost drop by drop, add half pint of rose water. The procedure is long and must be carefully done, the object being to break the almonds as fine as dust. Let stand over night, then strain through muslin cloth. Use the milk for face, and night, letting it dry on the face.

donnas. Even American women who master the grace of walking well in their youth seem to lose it in old age. Watch an old woman walking, and you will find that she is flat-footed and ungainly, and we should do everything that is possible to make old age comely. We dress better than we did, we know better what suits us, and how to put on our clothes properly, which is half the battle.

But—there will be many dissentients. This, there, is a very graceful woman, and the increased height in the majority of our sex does not tend that way. We are "too angular" and "too down-right" in our movements. The modern school indulges in games much on the same lines as her brothers, to the great improvement of her health and her physique; but when the school days are over there is not that due cultivation of grace which would add so materially to womanly charms. Note the swinging, out of well-dressed women in the streets, the movement of the arms accompanying the movements of the body, the lack of repose, and far too often the lack of dignity.

Parents with children should realize that the first duty, going to women is to secure a training which shall confirm their health and perfect their beauty.

We rarely realize the ideal Greek beauty, and yet they were a long-lived race, and we probably should add to our length of days if we followed in their footsteps.

There are plenty of paraphernalia for home gymnastics, which should be set up in our bedrooms and used judiciously daily. But simple exercises without anything with so wonderful and keep the body well braced and assist grace of deportment. Some exercises should be carried out every morning, either before or after the daily bath. If the bath be a hot one before, for fear of chills, and before, of course, the exercise are put on.

NOURISHMENT FOR THE BABY.

Neither Milk Nor Solid Food Should Be Forced or Urged.

Do not at any time force or urge milk or solid food upon the child; if he should refuse part or the whole of a feeding, let that meal go, and do not give any food until the next feeding hour comes.

For the first 24 hours after birth very little food is necessary; feed the infant about once in five hours. If it is possible, the baby should be nursed by the mother, as the nourishment it receives from her contains certain ingredients which are necessary to cleanse the stomach and intestinal tract of the newly-born, as well as to stimulate the digestive juices to activity. If for some good reason it is not possible for the mother to nurse her child, give as a substitute a little boiled water slightly sweetened or thin gruel dextrinized. After the first 36 hours milk can be given in a diluted form. Cow's milk can be diluted, plain, or in the form of top milk. The diluent should be thin gruel or boiled water, Harper's Bazar.

Dolly Varden Hats.

Morning hats are extremely simple. The Dolly Varden is perhaps one of the most becoming novelties, and its simplicity makes its charm even more apparent, says the American Register. Ribbons will be largely used for morning and country millinery, and the full "riches" for girls' hats will be revived in tulle and glass silks.

IN DOTTED SWISS MUSLIN.

Daisy Apron Ornamented with Colored Embroidery Silk.

Dotted swiss muslin is the material used in making this apron. Quantity necessary is a piece 33 inches long by 30 inches wide. The hem on each side is 1 1/2 inches wide. At the bottom is 2 1/2 inches wide. Yellow embroidery silk is used for feather stitching the hem. The three corners of embroidery across the bottom, representing the tail of the apron.

sent ox-eyed daisies. Yellow silk to be used for the petals, each petal having four stitches, the two center ones being a little longer than the ones on each side. Brown embroidery silk is used for the center of the daisies, these being French knots. The top of the apron is turned over 2 1/2 inches and has four rows of stitching. On the wrong side of the shirring sew a piece of plaid muslin, at the threads, and sew yellow satin ribbon on the right-hand side for the belt.
